DISCUSSION GUIDE

This Merger Communications Manager Toolkit has been developed to help you lead a discussion with your employees about the company's planned transaction with Nicor. In addition to complementing the electronic updates employees receive, such a discussion will foster an environment that supports open and ongoing dialogue about the merger. It is for this reason that you are being asked to incorporate a discussion about the planned merger into a regular meeting with your employees before the end of April. A quarter removed from hearing about the merger from senior executives late last year, it is an ideal opportunity to reiterate the business drivers of the merger, review the merger milestones and discuss the integration planning process with your employees.

This update of the Merger Communications Manager Toolkit includes the following items, which you are encouraged to review in advance of your team meeting:

Employee Handout (sent via interoffice mail)

Designed to complement a conversation about the merger, it is not designed to stand alone. Please do not distribute it in place of a discussion with your employees.

PowerPoint Presentation and Script

A quick merger update, including the status of merger milestones and an overview of the integration planning process. To access the script, click on 'view' in the toolbar and select 'Notes Pages.'

Key Management Messages

A summary of top management messages about the merger.

What We Know and Don't Yet Know

A quick reference guide to help you reinforce what we do know in the midst of so much uncertainty.

Q&A Summary

A compilation of all merger-related questions and answers published to date, arranged by topic.

Consistency of message throughout the enterprise is critical to a successful integration effort. It's important for all audiences – both internal and external – to hear messages that are consistent and congruent. Please do not embellish or stray into topics not covered either in this kit or in previously documented communications (which can be found on the Merger Communications page of Planet). If you would like more information about any of the topics covered, check the Merger Communications page of Planet or contact your senior executive.

Your leadership is vital to a successful merger experience for your team. It's helpful to proactively engage in conversation with your employees about the merger and to acknowledge that this transition period is likely to create some uncertainty that may remain until the integration process is complete.

It's also important to listen to and acknowledge employees' questions and concerns, even if you are unable to fully address them. You are likely to be asked questions to which you don't yet have the answers. It's okay to admit that you don't have all the answers. Please use this response in those situations:

“That's a great question and I understand why knowing the answer is important to you. At this point, we're very early in the process; there's a lot of work ahead that our companies need to do in order to answer your question fully. Our commitment to you is that we will answer all of your questions as quickly and completely as possible, and will keep you informed of important developments.”

The merger mailbox (merger@aglresources.com) is an additional resource for questions. You can encourage employees to submit questions themselves or you may submit questions for them. As we are able, we will address questions sent to the mailbox in Merger Update communications or in the FAQs on the Merger Communications page of Planet.

As you begin to have more frequent communications about the merger, it is important to be aware of the company's responsibilities with regard to SEC compliance. Any distributed communication (electronic or print) about the merger must be filed with the SEC, through the close of the merger. Because of this requirement, it is important that you use only approved and provided merger communications materials with both internal and external audiences. Should you have a pressing need to include merger information in an email, document or presentation – even if the information is considered public knowledge – such a use must be reviewed in advance. Contact Yvonne Merkel (ymerkel@aglresources.com) for assistance with or questions about merger communications.

Finally, your feedback about your merger-related discussions with your team members will help us develop better materials going forward and continue to bring you the tools and information you need to have these conversations. After you share the information in this version of the Manager Toolkit with your employees, please go to <http://home/mergercommunications.asp> and complete the brief survey in the Manager Toolkit section before May 16th to confirm you have held this discussion with your team and to provide us valuable feedback about your experience.
