Below is a message sent on behalf of David Gartzke, Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer of ADESA, Inc. (the Company) to the Company's employees:

On December 22, 2006, we informed you that ADESA had signed a definitive agreement to be acquired by a consortium of private equity firms, led by Kelso & Company. Today, that group announced that, upon consummation of the transaction, the following four people would assume senior leadership positions in the new management team. They are:

- Brian Clingen would be named Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the combined company. Brian is an investor and a board member of Insurance Auto Auctions, Inc. (IAAI) and brings significant operational and investment experience in the automotive services industry.
- Jim Hallett would be named President and Chief Executive Officer of the whole car auction operations. Many of you already know Jim, who was President of ADESA from August 1996 through May 2005. Most recently, he served as President of the Columbus Fair Auto Auction.
- Tom O'Brien would be named President and Chief Operating Officer of the combined salvage auctions (ADESA Impact and IAAI). Tom is currently President and CEO of IAAI.
- John Nordin would be named Executive Vice President and Chief Information Officer of the combined company. John is currently Vice President and CIO of IAAI. He joined IAAI in late 2003 and has been involved in Information Technology for 25 years, holding the position of CIO for the last 12 years.

I have spoken with Brian and he wanted me to send all of you the following message: I am very excited for the opportunity to continue improving upon the great success the ADESA companies have already achieved. With the help and continued hard work of the new and existing management team and employees, I believe that we can continue to build an even stronger and more successful organization. I know I speak for Tom O'Brien and all of the IAAI employees when I describe their excitement about this potential new partnership and the opportunities it presents.

I agree with Brian's comments and am committed to a smooth and successful transition to this management team at the close of the transaction and to the continued success of the ADESA companies in the interim. Again, the above management changes will not take effect until the sale is complete.

As other related information becomes available, I will let you know.

We know that this pending sale can be a distraction, but I encourage all of you to continue your best efforts to make ADESA the best it can be for our customers, our current and future owners and our co-workers. I look forward to an exciting 2007 and I hope you will do the same.

Due to a typographical error, Mr. O'Brien is incorrectly noted in Mr. Gartzke's message as being named President and Chief Operating Officer of the combined salvage operations upon consummation of the transaction. As correctly noted in the following press release, Mr. O'Brien will be named President and Chief Executive Officer of the combined salvage operations upon consummation of the transaction.

With the help and continued hard work of the new and existing management team and employees, I believe we can continue to build an even stronger and more successful organization. I know I speak for Tom and all of the IAAI employees when I describe their excitement about this new partnership and the opportunities it presents.
