Subject: MONY Issues Statement on Postponing Stockholder Meeting in Response to Delaware Chancery Court Order

You may be aware of a number of news stories issued yesterday regarding a ruling made by The Delaware Court of Chancery. I want you to know that there is more to the story than you might have read, and that the news is, by and large, very good for MONY.

The Delaware Court of Chancery has affirmed that the MONY Board acted reasonably in deciding to approve AXA Financial's $31.00 per share cash merger proposal.

The Court noted, among other things, that "...the record shows the [MONY] Board acted reasonably in making its determination. The Court further noted that "...the Court finds a five-month check more than adequate to determine if the price offered by AXA was the best price reasonably available....

The Court has asked that MONY provide shareholders with additional disclosure relating to its change-of-control agreements with its senior executives. We will amend our proxy statement to accommodate the additional information. As a result, we will postpone the special meeting of stockholders to vote on the proposed merger, which was originally scheduled for February 24, 2004. We look forward to communicating the date for the special meeting shortly.

The Court rejected all of the other claims of dissident shareholders for supplemental disclosure, and ruled that all of the other challenges to the proxy statement were unlikely to succeed at trial.
