Forest Labs board needs change

Two independent proxy advisory firms issued analyses criticizing Forest Labs on several dimensions

Presiding independent director Goodman oversaw operations and made decisions leading to civil and criminal violations, also lacks independence

Compensation not tied to share performance Icahn Nominees will help drive necessary change, vote the GOLD card!

2

ISS and Glass Lewis both criticized Forest Labs for deeply flawed corporate governance

The image of the CEO sitting in on the ostensibly independent directors as they discuss whether or not to support him is uncomfortably close to that of a show trial: a theatrical demonstration of power, with a pre-determined outcome, in which those with ostensible authority must first and foremost demonstrate their zealous personal loyalty to the one who holds real

All the subsequent protestations about personal integrity and independence ring a little hollow, when the right course of action calling an executive session to let the unaffiliated outside directors debate the issues in private, without any undue influence from insiders was both an obvious and easy choice. That the meeting appears to have been orchestrated from the C-suite the General Counsel, rather than the board's own outside advisors, apparently prepared and presented the materials which shaped the discussion does not help matters.

If there was ever a moment for the independent directors to take matters into their own hands, this was it. That they failed to do so

and perhaps even failed to recognize their own responsibility
to do
so

is

We believe that there are various aspects of the Company's corporate governance that could suggest that the

. . .we believe that Mr. Solomon and other Company insiders should have recused themselves from the board deliberations and actual voting on the matter.

. . .we note that the board's primary committees (audit, compensation, and nominating and governance) have historically been comprised of the board's longest tenured directors, which we believe may blunt the impact

that can be made by the recently-appointed directors.

. . .the appointment of Mr. Goodman as presiding director leaves us feeling highly dubious of the board's ability to enact truly positive corporate governance reforms and only serves to drive home the Icahn Group's argument that the Company's board is filled with

ISS criticizes appearance of nepotism, in addition to highlighting corp. gov. concerns

However, the fact that the succession plan involves having a senior executive presumably

a candidate for

top

job

report to his own father who presumably has some influence in the matter is another bad omen. SVP Solomon may in fact be the best candidate for the job, internally or externally: it is hard to know, if all his senior level executive experience came at the firm his father has been running
four decades.

At
publicly-held company, succession planning should never be confused, visually or procedurally, with establishing a dynasty.
Unaffiliated shareholders should be concerned about the degree to which the independent directors are truly independent of the long-serving Chairman and CEO. Among the red flags are these directors
apparent unwillingness to exclude the CEO from high-stakes discussions such as the company's response to threatened regulatory action against him individually

in which he is clearly conflicted, and their apparently easy acceptance of the fundamental conflict
involved
in making the CEO's
own
son
one of his direct reports.

performance

shareholders over the half decade leading up to the announcement of this proxy contest have outpaced

by the specialty pharma peers, but even by a blended group of big and specialty pharma peers.

We find that the Company's stock price performance was better than that of the Peer Group over the recent one-year period but has been worse than the Peer Group over the

. . . we note that the Company's compounded annual growth rates for revenue and operating income over the three- and five-year periods ended December 31, 2010 were all below the range of growth rates observed in the Peer Group. This raises some concerns that the board and management may not have been proactive enough in facilitating greater growth for the Company and its shareholders in recent years. Goodman's poor business judgment and lack of independence qualify him for removal

Current presiding independent director Goodman was President and COO, responsible for decisions leading to civil and criminal pleadings, payment of ~$300M in fines, and higher costs and administrative burdens from implementation of corporate integrity agreement

Glass Lewis states:

- Moreover, we note that the board has neither appointed an independent chairman nor an independent presiding director

.we do not consider him [Goodman] to be independent from the Company's management given that he was employed as an executive by the Company within the past five years, served as a Company executive for more than 25 years, and received approximately $198,000 in retirement benefits from the Company during fiscal year 2011.

any such information.

have not sought, nor have we received, permission from any third-party to include their information in this presentation.

Many of the statements in this presentation reflect our subjective belief. Although we have reviewed and analyzed the information that has informed our opinions, we do not guarantee the accuracy of any such beliefs.

Sections of this presentation refer to the experience of our nominees for director at Forest Laboratories during their tenure

as directors

of Biogen Idec,

ImClone
Systems
Inc., Genzyme
Corporation,
Amylin
Pharmaceuticals,
and Enzon
Pharmaceuticals.

believe their experience
these companies

was

success and resulted in an increase in shareholder value that benefited all shareholders. However, their success at these companies is not necessarily indicative of future results at Forest Laboratories if our nominees were

elected

the

Forest

Laboratories

Board

of Directors.

In

addition,

acknowledge that if elected, our nominees will be a minority of the directors and will not alone be able to adopt resolutions.
