CB&I and McDermott to Combine

Customer Messaging and Talking Points

A Transformative Combination

Combining the world-class expertise, capabilities and experience of CB&I and McDermott offers operational and financial benefits. The boards and executives of both companies decided to unite the companies in order to:

Create a global leader in onshore and offshore facility construction in the upstream and downstream hydrocarbon and power end markets

Form a business that is underpinned by scale, diversification and technology

A More Competitive, Diverse Company

Together, we are forming a leading vertically integrated onshore-offshore company, with broadened reach across the entire energy industry and a substantial competitive advantage that responds to evolving customer needs. This gives us tremendous confidence in the new company and the value we will create for our customers and other key stakeholders.

We are confident that the new company will:

Provide customer-centric, total solutions

Differentiate by collaborating on end-to-end engineered and constructed facility solutions executed to maximize customer asset value

Generate stakeholder returns by managing risk through a focus on people, process and vertical integration

Have the scale to compete with global E&C contractors

Counter market cyclicality through more diverse upstream and downstream offerings

We are also confident in what we can achieve by uniting our businesses and cultures. Opportunities include:

Integration of our engineering, construction and fabrication capabilities

Cultural alignment, especially rigor around risk management

Stronger Financial Profile, Best Path Forward

CB&I's financial outlook has improved recently with the sale of the Capital Services business, the execution of its cost savings program, suspension of its quarterly dividend, an improved outlook on new awards and prospects and several other factors.

CB&I's Supervisory Board and management team have been working together diligently to determine our best path forward to position CB&I for long-term growth and success. While CB&I announced the intent to sell its Technology and former Engineered Products businesses in August to strengthen its balance sheet, after careful consideration, our board and management team ultimately decided to pursue this alternative path for CB&I. This is a path that we believe will create significant long-term opportunity for shareholders, customers and employees.

The combined company will benefit from an enhanced financial profile primed to drive growth and achieve significant synergies, will have a stronger capital structure and is expected to generate strong free cash flow.

A Collaborative and Innovative Partner for Customers

As our industry continues to evolve, combining McDermott and CB&I ensures the combined company is able to be the most collaborative and innovative partner for our customers.

McDermott and CB&I share a common culture focused on safety and customer engagement, ensuring a seamless transition for partners and employees worldwide. Following the close of the transaction, McDermott's President and CEO, David Dickson, will lead the combined company. Additionally, CB&I President & CEO, Patrick K. Mullen, will stay with the company for a transition period to assist with the integration efforts as we work to ensure the capabilities and synergies of the combined company are maximized.

Together, McDermott and CB&I will have best-in-class operational excellence driven by consistency in systems, processes, execution and culture.
