First Trust Intermediate Duration Preferred & Income Fund (FPF)

Annual Letter from the Chairman and CEO

October 31, 2018

Dear Shareholders,

First Trust is pleased to provide you with the annual report for the First Trust Intermediate Duration Preferred & Income Fund (the “Fund”), which contains detailed information about the Fund for the twelve months ended October 31, 2018, including a market overview and a performance analysis. We encourage you to read this report carefully and discuss it with your financial advisor.

As I mentioned in my April 2018 letter, 2017 was a very strong year for U.S. and global markets. Investors were rewarded with rising markets and very little volatility. As 2018 began, investors were hoping for another strong year in the markets. For the entire first quarter, however, increased market volatility was the norm for U.S. and global markets. The markets continued their volatility throughout the second quarter. During April and May, the Dow Jones Industrial Average (“DJIA”) closed out each month slightly down, but ended both June and July slightly up. August was a strong month for stocks, and the DJIA finished August just under its previous high in January of 2018. At the close of the third quarter in September, the markets had moved higher into positive territory. In fact, all three major U.S. indices (the Nasdaq Composite Index, the DJIA and the S& P 500® Index) hit record levels during the third quarter. In October, markets were again very volatile, surprising analysts and investors alike. Both global and U.S. markets fell on fears of slowing growth, trade wars and higher interest rates. The DJIA was down 5% for October and the MSCI EAFE Index, an index of stocks in 21 developed markets (excluding the U.S. and Canada), was down 9% for the same period.

Based on continued strong job growth and the economic outlook in the U.S., the Federal Reserve (the “Fed”) raised interest rates in March, June and September. At their September meeting, the Fed also indicated the possibility of one more rate hike in 2018 as well as three more rate hikes in 2019.

Trade tensions have had an impact on markets around the world and could continue to do so in the future. However, our economists believe that the long-term impact of U.S. tariffs will be to encourage countries to come back to the table and talk about more equal trade. Despite market volatility, we continue to believe that the combination of low interest rates, low inflation and strong corporate earnings still point to a positive economic environment and further growth, though we understand that past performance can never guarantee future performance.

We continue to believe that you should invest for the long term and be prepared for market movements, which can happen at any time. You can do this by keeping current on your portfolio and by speaking regularly with your investment professional. Markets go up and they also go down, but savvy investors are prepared for either through careful attention to investment goals.

Thank you for giving First Trust the opportunity to be a part of your financial plan. We value our relationship with you and will report on the Fund again in six months.

Sincerely,

James A. Bowen

Chairman of the Board of Trustees

Chief Executive Officer of First Trust Advisors L.P.

Market Recap

The fiscal year ended October 31, 2018 was a volatile period for the preferred and hybrid securities market with all parts of the market experiencing negative performance. This was largely driven by rising interest rates as well as economic and political headlines across the globe. The Federal Reserve (the “Fed”) guided short-term interest rates higher by 0.25% four times during the period as improving economic and employment data in the United States supported further rate hikes. Longer term interest rates also moved higher, but the curve flattened substantially as short-term rates increased at a faster pace. Credit spreads also managed to tighten within the preferred and hybrid securities market amid continued improvement in credit fundamentals, despite political uncertainty in Turkey, BREXIT negotiations, and trade tensions between China and the United States weighing on fixed income markets overall. These headlines pressured contingent capital securities (“CoCos”) in particular, which are largely issued by European banks. As a result, CoCos, as measured by the ICE BofAML USD Investment Grade Contingent Capital Index (“COCU”), were the worst performing part of the preferred and hybrid market during the period, as COCU was down -2.52%. Finally, the retail $25 par market outperformed the institutional $1000 par market during the period, as limited new issuance and net negative supply supported that part of the market. For the fiscal year, the retail market fell 1.23% while the institutional market lost 2.14% according to The ICE BofAML Fixed Rate Preferred Securities Index (“POP1”) and the ICE BofAML U.S. Capital Securities Index (“C0CS”), respectively.

Performance Analysis

For the fiscal year ended October 31, 2018, the net asset value (“NAV”) and market price total returns for the Fund were -2.23% and -10.78%, respectively. This compares to a total return of -1.67% for the Fund’s benchmark, which is a 50/50 blend of POP1 and C0CS. The Fund’s underperformance was primarily due to leverage and an overweight to CoCos. However, the Fund was able to partially offset the underperformance through security selection within $25 par securities and non-CoCo institutional securities and an overweight to floating rate securities.

While the Fund’s leverage weighed on performance in a negative market, CoCos issued by European banks, which are not held in the benchmark, were the primary reason for underperformance during the period. Political volatility in Italy, BREXIT negotiations, and tariffs from the United States all weighed on CoCos throughout the period, despite improvements in European bank capitalization. CoCos continue to offer some of the most attractive yields and structures in the preferred and hybrid securities market and the Fund’s CoCo holdings are issued by well-capitalized multinational banks with stable credit fundamentals that we believe will outperform longer term.

Positive contributors to the Fund’s performance relative to the benchmark included superior security selection within $25 par securities and non-CoCo institutional securities. The Fund’s focus on variable rate securities with wide back-end reset spreads and shorter durations both contributed positively to relative performance.

The Fund also benefited from overweighting floating rate securities, which appreciated with rising short-term interest rates, spread tightening and a flattening yield curve. In the current rising interest rate environment, we believe it is prudent to maintain a conservative stance in regard to interest rates relative to the benchmark and peers. The Fund also employed a hedging strategy throughout the year in order to further manage its interest rate risk. This strategy consisted of an interest rate swap, which benefited from the rising rate environment. Going forward, we continue to believe it is prudent to maintain a conservative interest rate stance relative to the benchmark, particularly if we are able to do so while the Fund continues to pay the highest distribution rate of peer closed-end funds.

Market and Fund Outlook

As we approach 2019, we believe the preferred and hybrid securities market will be positively supported by strong issuer credit fundamentals, attractive yields compared to other fixed income asset classes and a positive market technical from limited net new issue supply into 2019. Although headline risks of global trade wars and other geopolitical events will likely persist for the next 6 to 12 months, in our opinion, preferred and hybrid securities valuations already reflect these risks, in our opinion, and we believe credit fundamentals of issuers in this asset class are generally strong enough to withstand the possibility of slowing economic growth.

We continue to believe that U.S. interest rates should broadly continue to shift higher and the Treasury yield curve is likely to remain relatively flat into 2019. We believe short-term rates are likely to increase due to Fed normalization, while inflation pressures are likely to slowly push longer term rates higher overall. In the current environment, we believe the best total return and risk profile will likely be achieved by overweighting short to intermediate term securities. Additionally, absolute yields and yield spreads of preferreds and hybrids relative to U.S. Treasuries and other credit spread products remain at attractive levels and may continue to provide a cushion against rising interest rates, in our opinion.

The Fund will attempt to position the portfolio to protect against the largest risks in the market and continue to identify the best securities in all parts of the preferred and hybrid securities market to construct balanced portfolios that we believe will lead to long term outperformance.
