SUMMARY

This summary and the remainder of this Transaction Statement on Schedule 13E-3 provide information describing the "going private" merger involving Bulova Corporation, referred to as "Bulova," 2004-LCBV Corporation, referred to as "Merger Sub," and Loews Corporation, referred to as "Loews." We sometimes refer to Merger Sub and Loews together as the "Filing Persons" or "we" or "us." This statement includes discussions of, among other things, how the merger affects you, what your rights are with respect to the merger as a shareholder of Bulova and our position on the fairness of the merger to you and the other public shareholders of Bulova, who we refer to as Bulova's "public shareholders."

OVERVIEW AND PURPOSE OF THE MERGER (SEE PAGE 2).

- . Loews currently owns approximately 97% of Bulova's outstanding common stock.
- . Merger Sub was recently organized as a wholly owned subsidiary of Loews to effect the merger with Bulova. Prior to effecting the merger, Loews will contribute all of its shares of Bulova common stock to Merger Sub.
- . Thereafter, Merger Sub will merge with and into Bulova, with Bulova as the surviving corporation. As a result of the merger, Bulova's public shareholders (other than those, if any, who object to the merger and properly exercise their statutory dissenters' rights, which are discussed below) will receive $35.00 in cash for each of their shares of Bulova common stock, and Bulova will become a wholly owned subsidiary of Loews.
- . The purpose of the merger is for Loews to acquire all of the shares of Bulova common stock that it does not already own, thus making Bulova a private company and enabling Bulova to save the costs associated with being a public company. At the same time, the merger will provide a source of liquidity to Bulova's public shareholders and enable them to receive cash for their shares without having to pay brokerage commissions.
- . Because Loews currently owns more than 90% of the outstanding shares of Bulova common stock and will contribute these shares to Merger Sub, Merger Sub is permitted under New York law to effect the merger by action of its board of directors, without any action on the part of the board of directors or public shareholders of Bulova.

- . We will pay Bulova's public shareholders for their shares of Bulova common stock promptly after the completion of the merger. Instructions for surrendering stock certificates for payment will be set forth in a Notice of Merger and a Letter of Transmittal, which will be mailed to each Bulova public shareholder promptly after the effective date of the merger. You should not submit your stock certificates until after you receive and review these documents.
- . We expect that the merger will become effective on or about [], 2005, which is twenty (20) days after the date on which we are mailing this statement to Bulova's public shareholders (or as soon thereafter as possible).

- . The total amount of funds necessary to make the cash payments that Bulova's public shareholders will be entitled to receive and to pay related expenses is estimated to be approximately $5,350,000. All of such funds will be provided by Loews out of its available cash.

OUR POSITION ON THE FAIRNESS OF THE MERGER (SEE PAGE 4).

We have concluded that the merger is both substantively and procedurally fair to Bulova's public shareholders based primarily on the following factors:

- . The $35.00 per share merger price represents a significant premium to the recent and historical range of trading prices of Bulova's common stock in the over-the-counter market, including an 18.6% premium over the average trading price during the twelve months ended November 15, 2004 and an 18.6% premium over the share price on November 24, 2004, the last trading day on which a trade was reported prior to the announcement of our intent to effect the merger. We believe that these percentage premiums compare favorably to the range of percentage premiums of other comparable "going private" transactions.
- . The trading market for Bulova's common stock is extremely illiquid, with an average of less than 500 shares being traded each week during the twelve months ended November 15, 2004 and no trades at all taking place on more than 225 out of 259 trading days during that period. The merger represents an opportunity for Bulova's public shareholders to realize cash for their shares, at a premium price, which would otherwise be extremely difficult or impossible, given such illiquidity.
- . The $35.00 per share merger price implies an enterprise value of Bulova for approximately $152.2 million, which reflects a multiple of 0.93 times Bulova's revenue, 9.8 times Bulova's earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization and a charge for environmental expenses (referred to as "EBITDA"), and 17.3 times Bulova's net income, all for the twelve months ended September 30, 2004, and 13.8 times Bulova's estimated net income for the year ending December 31, 2005. We determined enterprise value by multiplying the $35.00 per share merger price by the number of shares of Bulova common stock outstanding and adding net debt (which includes post-retirement liabilities less cash and cash equivalents, including cash received by Bulova in October 2004 from the sale of its Brooklyn, N.Y. warehouse, which in this case is a negative number). We believe that these multiples compare favorably to the range of multiples of other publicly traded companies of comparable size in comparable industries.
- . The merger consideration will be paid entirely in cash and is not subject to any financing condition or deferral.

ii

- . Each Bulova public shareholder is entitled to exercise dissenters' rights under New York law and to demand payment of the "fair value" for his or her shares of Bulova common stock, as determined by a court in a judicial proceeding.

Completion of the merger will have the following consequences:

- . Bulova will become a wholly owned subsidiary of Loews.
- . Each share of Bulova common stock owned by a Bulova public shareholder (other than those, if any, held by Bulova public shareholders who properly exercise their dissenters' rights) will be converted into the right to receive $35.00 in cash.
- . Shares of Bulova common stock will no longer be publicly traded. In addition, Bulova will no longer be subject to the costly reporting and other requirements of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, including those recently instituted under the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, and the requirements to file annual, quarterly and other reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission.
- . Only Loews will have the opportunity to participate in the future earnings and growth, if any, of Bulova. Similarly, only Loews will face the risk of any losses from Bulova's operations or any decline in value of Bulova after the merger.

RIGHTS OF DISSENTING SHAREHOLDERS (SEE PAGE 9).

Any Bulova public shareholder who objects to the merger will have the right to dissent from the merger and demand payment of the "fair value" of his or her shares of Bulova common stock, as determined in a judicial appraisal proceeding in accordance with Section 623 of the New York Business Corporation Law. This value may be more or less than the $35.00 per share payable in the merger. In order to perfect these rights, a dissenting shareholder must file a written notice of election to dissent within 20 days after the date of mailing of the Notice of Merger and must otherwise comply with the procedures set forth in Section 623 of the New York Business Corporation Law. Those procedures are summarized below under the caption of "Rights of Dissenting Shareholders." Any failure by a dissenting shareholder to comply with the procedures contained in Section 623 will result in an irrevocable loss of his or her dissenters' rights. Any Bulova public shareholder who wishes to exercise dissenters' rights is encouraged to seek advice from his or her legal counsel.

FOR MORE INFORMATION (SEE PAGES 12 and 15).

Certain information regarding Bulova and Loews is set forth below under the captions "Information About Bulova" and "Information About Us" and more detailed information is available from their public filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

INTRODUCTION

This Transaction Statement on Schedule 13E-3 (this "Schedule 13E-3") is being filed by (i) Loews Corporation, a Delaware corporation, and (ii) its wholly owned subsidiary, 2004-LCBV Corporation, a New York corporation, pursuant to Section 13(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the "Exchange Act"), and Rule 13e-3 thereunder. This Schedule 13E-3 provides information relating to the "going private" merger of Merger Sub with and into Bulova. This Schedule 13E-3 is first being mailed to Bulova's public shareholders on or about [], 2004.

This Schedule 13E-3 and the documents incorporated by reference in this Schedule 13E-3 include certain forward-looking statements within the meaning of the federal securities laws. These forward-looking statements include statements regarding our intent, belief or current expectations. Forward-looking statements are inherently uncertain and subject to a variety of risks that could cause actual results to differ materially from what we expect. Given these risk factors, you should not place undue reliance on these forward-looking statements. Any such forward-looking statements speak only as of the date of this Schedule 13E-3 and we expressly disclaim any obligation or undertaking to update any forward-looking statement to reflect any change in expectations or any change in events, conditions or circumstances on which any forward-looking statement is based.

DESCRIPTION OF THE MERGER

A total of 4,599,857 shares of Bulova's common stock, par value $5.00 per share ("Bulova common stock"), are currently outstanding. Loews owns 4,449,859 shares, or approximately 97%, of such shares, and intends to transfer all of them to Merger Sub prior to the effective date of a proposed short-form merger of Merger Sub with and into Bulova pursuant to Section 905 of the New York Business Corporation Law (the "NYBCL"). We expect that the merger will become effective on or about [], 2005, which is twenty (20) days after the date on which we are mailing this Schedule 13E-3 to Bulova's public shareholders (or as soon thereafter as possible).

Upon the consummation of the merger, each outstanding share of Bulova common stock will be canceled and, except for shares held by Merger Sub or any shareholder of Bulova who properly exercises his or her statutory dissenters' rights under the NYBCL, will be automatically converted into the right to receive $35.00 per share in cash, without interest, upon surrender of the certificate for such share to a paying agent who will be appointed by us to make such payments. Instructions with regard to the surrender of stock certificates for payment, together with a description of your dissenters' rights, will be set forth in a Notice of Merger and a Letter of Transmittal, which will be mailed to you promptly after the effective date of the merger. You should not submit your stock certificates until you have received and reviewed these documents.

Under the NYBCL, because Merger Sub will own more than 90% of the outstanding shares of Bulova common stock immediately prior to the merger, Merger Sub will have the power to effect the merger by action of its board of directors. No approval is required or will be sought from the board of directors or public shareholders of Bulova. Loews, as the sole shareholder of Merger

Sub, has approved the merger. Bulova will be the surviving corporation in the merger and, following the merger, will be wholly owned by Loews.

PURPOSES, ALTERNATIVES, REASONS AND EFFECTS OF THE MERGER

Purposes

Edgar Filing: BULOVA CORP - Form SC 13E3

The principal purpose of the merger is for Loews to acquire all of the shares of Bulova common stock that it does not already own. This will enable Bulova to eliminate the expenses, administrative burdens and potential liabilities associated with being a public company. Given the very small number and percentage of shares of Bulova common stock in public hands, we do not believe the costs and burdens of maintaining Bulova's status as a public company are justified. At the same time, the merger will provide a source of liquidity to Bulova's public shareholders and an opportunity for them to obtain a return on their investment, which, in the absence of such a transaction, might not be realizable at any time in the foreseeable future, and to do so without having to pay brokerage commissions.

Alternative Transaction Structures

We believe that effecting the transaction by way of a short-form merger between Bulova and Merger Sub under New York law is the most efficient and cost-effective way to accomplish the purposes described above. Alternative transaction structures, such as a long-form merger or a tender offer, were not considered since they would be unnecessarily time-consuming and costly, without providing any advantages to Bulova's public shareholders, Loews or Bulova.

Reasons for Taking Bulova Private

In determining whether to acquire the outstanding minority equity interest held by Bulova's public shareholders and to effect the merger, we considered the following factors to be the principal benefits of taking Bulova private:

- . The cost savings resulting from Bulova ceasing to be a public company, particularly those costs associated with Bulova having its annual financial statements separately audited and with preparing and filing separate quarterly, annual and other reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission. These costs have increased significantly since the passage in July 2002 of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 and the extensive rulemakings that followed by the Commission and the newly created Public Company Accounting Oversight Board. We anticipate that the merger will result in savings to Bulova of several hundred thousand dollars per year; and
- . The reduction in the amount of public information available to competitors about Bulova's business and financial results that would result from the termination of Bulova's obligations under the reporting requirements of the Exchange Act.

We considered the alternative of leaving Bulova as a majority-owned, public subsidiary. In our view, the lone advantage to us of this alternative would be our ability to invest the cash to be paid to Bulova's public shareholders as the merger price in other ways. We concluded that the advantages of taking Bulova private significantly outweigh this limited advantage of leaving Bulova as a majority-owned, public subsidiary, particularly in light of the recent substantial increases in the costs and administrative burdens associated with operating a public company following the adoption of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. Accordingly, we rejected this alternative.

We also considered the infrequency and extremely low volume of trading in Bulova common stock and considered that the merger would result in immediate and enhanced liquidity for Bulova's public shareholders.

Effects of the Merger

Edgar Filing: BULOVA CORP - Form SC 13E3

General. Upon completion of the merger, Loews will have complete control over the conduct of Bulova's business and will have a 100% interest in the net assets, the net book value and the net earnings of Bulova. In addition, Loews will be the sole beneficiary of any future increases in the value of Bulova and will bear the complete risk of any losses incurred in the operation of Bulova and any decreases in the value of Bulova.

Shareholders other than Loews and Merger Sub. Upon completion of the merger, Bulova's public shareholders will no longer have any interest in, and will not be shareholders of, Bulova and therefore will not participate in Bulova's future earnings and potential growth and will no longer bear the risk of any losses incurred in the operation of Bulova and any decreases in the value of Bulova. In addition, Bulova's public shareholders will not share in any distribution of proceeds from any future sales of assets or businesses of Bulova or its subsidiaries, none of which are contemplated at this time. All of the other incidents of stock ownership of Bulova's public shareholders, such as the rights to vote on certain corporate decisions, to elect directors and to receive dividends and distributions upon the liquidation of Bulova, as well as the benefit of potential increases in the value of their holdings in Bulova based on any improvements in Bulova's future performance, will be extinguished upon completion of the merger.

Upon completion of the merger, Bulova's public shareholders also will not bear the risks of potential decreases in the value of their holdings in Bulova resulting from any downturns in Bulova's future performance. Instead, Bulova's public shareholders will have liquidity, in the form of the cash merger price, in place of an ongoing equity interest in Bulova. In summary, if the merger is completed, Bulova's public shareholders will have no ongoing rights as shareholders of Bulova (other than the right to exercise dissenters' rights with respect to the merger, as described below).

Bulova Common Stock. Once the merger is consummated, public trading of Bulova common stock will cease and we intend to apply to deregister Bulova's common stock under the Exchange Act. As a result, Bulova will no longer be required to file reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission or otherwise be subject to the federal securities laws applicable to public companies.

OUR POSITION AS TO THE FAIRNESS OF THE MERGER

Because we own substantially all of the outstanding Bulova common stock, we may be deemed to be "affiliates" of Bulova within the meaning of Rule 12b-2 under the Exchange Act. Accordingly, the rules of the Securities and Exchange Commission require us to express our view as to the substantive and procedural fairness of the merger to you and Bulova's other public shareholders.

We believe that the merger is both substantively and procedurally fair to you and Bulova's other public shareholders. As discussed in greater detail below, with respect to substantive fairness, our belief is based on the following factors:

- . The merger represents an opportunity for Bulova's public shareholders to realize cash for their shares, which might otherwise be extremely difficult or impossible, given the illiquidity of the market for Bulova common stock. Historically, trading in Bulova common stock has been extremely light. As a result, any Bulova public shareholder who desires to sell even a relatively small number of shares would likely find demand for such shares to be very limited, and persistent attempts to sell such shares could lead to a reduction in the price to be received for such shares.

Edgar Filing: BULOVA CORP - Form SC 13E3

- . The trading market for Bulova's common stock is extremely illiquid, with an average of less than 500 shares being traded each week during the twelve months ended November 15, 2004 and no trades at all taking place on more than 225 out of 259 trading days during that period. The merger represents an opportunity for Bulova's public shareholders to realize cash for their shares, at a premium price, which would otherwise be extremely difficult or impossible, given such illiquidity.
- . The merger price of $35.00 per share of Bulova common stock compares favorably with the range of prices at which the shares have traded historically and in recent periods, including an 18.6% premium over the average trading price during the twelve months ended November 15, 2004 and an 18.6% premium over the share price on November 24, 2004, the last trading day on which a trade was reported prior to the announcement of our intent to effect the merger. We believe that these percentage premiums compare favorably to the range of percentage premiums of other comparable "going private" transactions. We also do not believe that it is realistic to expect that the market would sustain a price equal to or in excess of $35.00, particularly if more than a very small number of Bulova's public shareholders sought to sell their shares of Bulova common stock.
- . The $35.00 per share merger price implies an enterprise value for Bulova of approximately $152.2 million, which reflects a multiple of 0.93 times Bulova's revenue, 9.8 times Bulova's earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization and a charge relating to environmental expenses (referred to as "EBITDA") and 17.3 times Bulova's net income, all for the twelve months ended September 30, 2004, and 13.8 times Bulova's estimated net income for the year ending December 31, 2005. We believe that these multiples compare favorably to the range of multiples of other publicly traded companies of comparable size in comparable industries.

- . The merger consideration will be paid to Bulova's public shareholders entirely in cash and is not subject to any financing condition or deferral.

With respect to procedural fairness, we recognize that New York law allows us to effect the merger by action of Merger Sub's board of directors, without any action on the part of the board of directors or other shareholders of Bulova, but provides Bulova's public shareholders who object to the merger with the statutory right to have the "fair value" of their shares determined by a court and paid to them by following the procedures outlined in Section 623 of the NYBCL, which are described elsewhere in this Statement under the heading "Rights of Dissenting Shareholders."

A determination of fair value ultimately depends on an analysis of what a reasonable purchaser would pay for Bulova common stock. In order to make our determination, we conducted various analyses which are described below. We primarily considered the historical and recent trading prices for Bulova common stock, our analyses of Bulova's enterprise value relative to comparable companies, and the merger price premium relative to comparable "going private" transactions.

- . Market Price of Bulova Common Stock. As stated above, in considering the fairness of the merger to Bulova's public shareholders, we considered the trading activity in Bulova common stock, including a review of both historical and recent reported market prices and trading volumes. The most recent date on which a trade was reported prior to the date on which our intent to effect the merger was first announced was November 24, 2004, and the last reported sale price on that date was $29.50 on trading volume of 216 shares. The $35.00 merger price represents a premium of 18.6% over this last reported price. The average closing prices of Bulova common stock, as reported by Nasdaq, during the three months, one year and three years ended November 15, 2004 were $29.44, $29.50 and $27.15 on average weekly trading volume of 209, 482 and 330 shares, respectively. The $35.00 merger price represents a premium of 18.9%, 18.6% and 29.0%, respectively, over these historical trading prices. See "Information Concerning Bulova - Market for Bulova's Common Stock." Moreover, Bulova common stock has never traded at or above $35.00 per share, other than on a single day late in 2001 when a closing price of $37.00 was reported on a volume of 2,000 shares. The closing price on the immediately prior day on which any trading was reported was $20.00 on a volume of 200 shares, and the closing prices on the subsequent two trading days were $30.00 and $20.00 on volumes of 300 shares and 1,000 shares, respectively. Therefore, we do not believe that this unexplained single day price increase is meaningful and we did not consider it in determining or evaluating the fairness of the merger price.

We believe that $35.00 represents a fair price when compared with recent and historical reported trading prices. We recognize, however, that, due to the very small public float of Bulova common stock and the very low trading volume, there are inherent limitations on the extent to which the market can serve as a meaningful proxy for fair value. Nevertheless, we believe that trading price levels over time are useful in providing an overall analysis of the value of Bulova and Bulova common stock.

- Enterprise Value; Comparable Company Analysis. We conducted an analysis of the enterprise value of Bulova and then compared the multiples represented by the merger price to certain trading multiples of a group of 15 companies, which we believed to be generally comparable to Bulova, each of which is publicly traded, operates in the consumer products industry (in the categories of apparel and accessories, appliances and tools, and jewelry and silverware), and has a total market capitalization of between $100 million and $500 million. We note that these comparable companies do not represent the entire universe of potentially relevant companies, and that none of the companies used in the analysis is identical to Bulova. The companies included were Applica Incorporated, Ashworth, Inc., Cutter and Buck Inc., Haggar Corp., Hampshire Group, Limited, Hartmarx Corporation, Movado Group, Inc., National Presto Industries, Inc., OshKosh B'Gosh, Inc., Perry Ellis International, Inc., Quaker Fabric Corp., Samsonite Corporation, St. John Knits Int'l, Inc., Superior Uniform Group and Water Pik Technologies.

By multiplying the per share merger price of $35.00 by the 4,599,857 shares of Bulova common stock outstanding and adding net debt (including post-retirement liabilities, less cash and cash equivalents, including cash received by Bulova in October 2004 from the sale of its Brooklyn, N.Y. warehouse, which in this case is a negative number), we obtained an enterprise value for Bulova of approximately $152.2 million. This value is equivalent to 0.93 times Bulova's revenues, 9.8 times Bulova's EBITDA and 17.3 times Bulova's net income, all for the twelve months ended September 30, 2004, and 13.8 times Bulova's estimated net income for the year ending December 31, 2005.

We then compared these multiples to the trading multiples of the comparable companies, based on financial information obtained through Yahoo Finance. As we did for Bulova, we determined enterprise value for the comparable companies by calculating market capitalization (shares outstanding multiplied by price per share), plus the company's debt obligations, if any, less the company's cash, cash equivalents and short-term investments. Our analysis indicated the following:

	Enterprise Value as a Multiple of		Share Price as a Multiple of
	Last Twelve Months Revenues	Last Twelve Months EBITDA	Last Twelve Months EPS	2005 Estimated EPS*
	-----	-----	---	---
Low	0.26x	4.46x	11.1x	8.3x
High	1.33x	14.3x	35.7x	22.4x
Median	0.69x	7.3x	14.6x	15.0x
Bulova	0.93x	9.8x	17.3x	13.8x

*not available for all comparable companies

We note that the multiples represented by the merger price were within or above the range of the trading multiples of the comparable companies and believe that the merger price multiples compare favorably to the comparable companies. As noted above, none of the comparable companies is identical or directly comparable to Bulova. Further, an analysis of publicly-traded comparable companies is not mathematical; rather, it involves complex consideration and judgments concerning differences in financial and operating characteristics of the comparable companies and other factors that could affect the public trading of the comparable companies.

- Comparable Transaction Analysis. We also conducted a comparable transaction analysis for the purpose of comparing the merger price to the prices paid in other "going private" transactions.

There is limited public information available on "going private" transactions effected through a short-form merger involving the acquisition of 5% or less of the equity interest in a public company by the majority shareholder. Consequently, we expanded our comparable transaction analysis to include "going private" transactions involving the acquisition of up to 10% of the total equity of a public company.

We reviewed the terms of 29 "going private" transactions that were announced since 1995, each of which involved the acquisition of a minority interest of 10% or less, where the price per share was greater than $1.00 and the total value of the acquired shares was less than $50 million. We analyzed the merger price as a percentage premium to the share price on the day prior to the announcement of each comparable transaction. This analysis indicated that the percentage premium paid in these transactions ranged from a high of 93.9% to a low of -4.6%, with a median percentage premium of 14.8%. This compares to a premium of 18.6% which the merger price represents over the last reported sales price per share of

Bulova common stock on November 24, 2004, the last trading day on which a trade was reported prior to the announcement of our intent to effect the merger.

Based on the range of premiums paid in those transactions which we deemed generally comparable to the merger, we believe that the $35.00 merger price is fair to Bulova's public shareholders.

- . Net Book Value per Share of Bulova Common Stock. We determined that the net book value per share of Bulova common stock was $34.85 as of September 30, 2004, based on Bulova's reported shareholders' equity of $160.3 million, and a total of 4,599,857 shares of Bulova common stock outstanding as of such date. We believe that, while net book value per share is not a dispositive, or even a primary, factor in the valuation of Bulova common stock, it is a useful metric in an overall analysis of such value. We believe that the $35.00 merger price compares favorably to Bulova's net book value.
- . Discounted Cash Flow Analysis. We did not conduct a discounted cash flow analysis since neither we nor Bulova prepare any projections of Bulova's future cash flows beyond the current year. Projected future cash flows or earnings forecasts are a key variable in performing such an analysis.
- . Liquidation Analysis. We did not conduct a liquidation analysis since we intend to continue to operate Bulova as a going concern and not to liquidate the company.

We considered all of the foregoing factors and related analyses as a whole to support our belief that the merger is substantively and procedurally fair to Bulova's public shareholders. We also considered the following four additional factors, which could have negatively impacted our determination:

- . Following the merger, Bulova's public shareholders will cease to participate in the future earnings or growth, if any, of Bulova or benefit from an increase, if any, in the value of Bulova common stock.
- . In determining and evaluating the fairness of the merger price, our interests conflict with and are adverse to the interests of Bulova's public shareholders.
- . The merger is being effected as a "short-form" merger under New York law and consequently does not require approval by the board of directors or public shareholders of Bulova.
- . Because no action is required or is being taken by the board of directors of Bulova, the board did not establish a special committee of disinterested or independent directors to represent the interests of Bulova's public shareholders and did not engage an independent adviser to assist in evaluating the fairness of the transaction, including the merger price, to Bulova's public shareholders.

After considering these additional four factors, we concluded that none of these factors, alone or in the aggregate, is significant enough to outweigh the factors and analyses that we took into account to support our belief that the merger is substantively and procedurally fair to Bulova's public shareholders.

In view of the variety of factors considered in connection with making a determination as to the fairness of the merger to Bulova's public shareholders, and the complexity of these matters, we did not find it practicable, nor did we attempt, except as described above, to quantify, rank or otherwise assign relative weights to the specific factors we considered. Moreover, we did not undertake to make any specific determination or assign any particular weight to any single factor, but have conducted an overall analysis of the factors described above.

We did not consider any factors, other than as stated above, regarding the fairness of the merger to Bulova's public shareholders, as it is our view that the factors we considered provided a reasonable basis to form our belief. We did not consider the purchase prices paid by Loews for its shares of Bulova common stock in prior years to be material to our conclusion regarding the fairness of the merger and Loews has not acquired any shares of Bulova common stock in more than ten years. In addition, from time to time over the years since Loews acquired its Bulova shares, Loews and/or Bulova have engaged in discussions with unrelated third parties that expressed interest in purchasing Bulova. None of these discussions proceeded past a preliminary stage and we did not give significant consideration to these discussions in fixing the merger price. In the most recent case, after conducting preliminary due diligence, a potential strategic buyer verbally indicated a range of values it might be willing to pay for Bulova that was well below any price that might have been acceptable to Loews and that was well below the $35.00 per share merger price to be paid by Loews to Bulova's public shareholders.

REPORTS, OPINIONS, APPRAISALS AND NEGOTIATIONS

We did not engage any third parties to perform any financial analysis of, or prepare any reports, opinions or appraisals concerning, the merger or the value of Bulova or Bulova common stock and, accordingly, we did not receive any report, opinion or appraisal from an outside party relating to the fairness of the merger price being offered to Bulova's public shareholders or the fairness of the merger to us or to Bulova's public shareholders. The analyses described above were performed by internal personnel at Loews.

RIGHTS OF DISSENTING SHAREHOLDERS

Bulova public shareholders who object to the merger have certain rights under New York law. These rights, commonly called "appraisal" or "dissenters'" rights, entitle Bulova's public shareholders who follow required procedures to ask a court to determine the fair value of their shares and require us to pay that amount to such shareholders. The amount so determined may be more or less than the merger price payable in the merger. Appraisal rights will not be available unless and until the merger is consummated.

New York law provides that dissenters' rights are the exclusive remedy available to shareholders who object to the merger, unless the transaction is unlawful or fraudulent.

The following is a brief summary of the statutory procedures you must follow in order to perfect your dissenters' rights under New York law. This summary is not intended to be complete and is qualified in its entirety by reference to Sections 623 and 910 of the NYBCL, the texts of which are set forth in Exhibit (f) to this Schedule 13E-3. If you are considering pursuing your dissenters' rights, we would advise you to consult legal counsel since the failure to comply strictly with these provisions will result in a loss of your dissenters' rights.

Dissenters' rights cannot be exercised at this time. The information set forth below is for informational purposes only with respect to alternatives available to you if the merger is consummated. Following the merger, you will receive additional information concerning your dissenters' rights and the procedures to be followed to exercise those rights.

Promptly after the merger, a Notice of Merger and a Letter of Transmittal will be mailed to you for use in surrendering your shares for the cash payment you are entitled to receive as a result of the merger. The Notice of Merger will also explain your dissenters' rights and the procedures to be followed in order to exercise them. If you elect to dissent from the merger, then within 20 days after the Notice of Merger is mailed to you, you must file a written notice of your election to dissent with Bulova stating (i) your name and residence address, (ii) the number of shares as to which you dissent (which must be all of your shares of Bulova common stock) and (iii) a demand for payment of the fair value of your shares. If you complete and return the Letter of Transmittal and submit your share certificates for payment of the merger price, you will be deemed to have irrevocably waived your dissenters' rights.

At the time of filing a notice of election to dissent, or within one month thereafter, you must submit the certificates representing your Bulova shares to Bulova or its transfer agent for notation on the certificates of your election to dissent, after which the certificates will be returned to you. Failure to submit the certificates for such notation may result in the loss of your dissenters' rights.

Within 15 days after the expiration of the period during which you may file a notice of election to dissent, we and Bulova are required to make a written offer to each Bulova public shareholder who has properly filed such a notice to pay for his or her shares at a specified price which we consider to be the fair value of those shares. We will make such an offer, but we do not intend to offer to pay more than $35.00 per share. Such offer will be accompanied by a statement setting forth the aggregate number of shares with respect to which notices of election to dissent have been received and the aggregate number of holders of such shares. Such offer will also be accompanied by (a) advance payment to each dissenting shareholder who has submitted his or her certificates for notation thereon of the election to dissent of an amount equal to 80% of the amount of such offer or (b) as to each dissenting shareholder who has not yet submitted his or her certificates, a statement that we will make advance payment to him or her of such amount promptly upon submission of his or her certificates. Acceptance of such advance payment by a dissenting shareholder will not constitute a waiver of his or her dissenters' rights.

If we fail to make the offer within such 15-day period, or if the offer is made but a dissenting shareholder does not agree to it within 30 days after it is made, we are required to institute a special proceeding in the New York State Supreme Court, New York County, to determine the rights of dissenting shareholders and to fix the fair value of their shares of Bulova common stock. If we do not institute such a proceeding within 20 days after the expiration of the 30-day period, any dissenting shareholder may, within 30 days after such 20-day period, institute a proceeding for the same purpose. We do not intend to institute an appraisal proceeding. Therefore unless such a proceeding is instituted within such 30-day period by a dissenting shareholder all shareholders who filed a notice of election to dissent will lose their dissenters' rights (unless the court, for good cause shown, otherwise directs). All dissenting shareholders, other than those who agreed with us as to the price to be paid for their shares, will be made parties to the appraisal proceeding. The court will determine whether each dissenting shareholder is entitled to receive payment for his or her shares, and will then determine the fair value of the shares of Bulova common stock as of the close of business on the day prior to the date the merger was authorized. In fixing the fair value of the shares, the court will consider the nature of the transaction giving rise to Bulova's public shareholders' right to dissent and its effects on Bulova and Bulova's public shareholders, the concepts and methods then customary in the relevant securities and financial markets for determining the fair value of shares of a corporation engaging in a similar transaction under comparable circumstances and all other relevant factors. Within 60 days after the completion of the proceeding, we will pay to each dissenting shareholder the amount found to be due him or her, with interest thereon at such rate as the court finds to be equitable, upon surrender to us by such Bulova public shareholder of the certificates representing his or her Bulova shares. If the court finds that any dissenting shareholder's refusal to accept our offer was arbitrary, vexatious or otherwise not in good faith, no interest shall be allowed to him or her.

The parties to the appraisal proceeding will bear their own costs and expenses, including the fees and expenses of their counsel and of any experts employed by them, except that the court, in its discretion and under certain conditions, may assess all or any part of the costs, expenses and fees incurred by dissenting shareholders against us or may assess all or any part of the costs, expenses and fees incurred by us against any dissenting shareholders, including any dissenting shareholders who have withdrawn their notices of election, who the court finds were arbitrary, vexatious or otherwise not acting in good faith in refusing any offer of payment we may have made.

Any shareholder who files a notice of election to dissent will not have any rights as a shareholder of Bulova after the merger, other than the right to be paid the fair value of his or her shares under Section 623 of the NYBCL. Any notice of election to dissent may be withdrawn by a dissenting shareholder at any time within 60 days after the effective time of the merger (or, if we fail to make a timely offer to pay such Bulova public shareholder the fair value of his or her shares as provided above, at any time within 60 days after the date such offer is made) or thereafter with our written consent. Any dissenting shareholder who withdraws his or her notice of election to dissent or otherwise loses his or her dissenters' rights will thereupon have the right to receive the $35.00 per share merger price in cash for each of his or her shares.

CERTAIN FEDERAL INCOME TAX CONSEQUENCES OF THE MERGER

The following is a general summary of the material U.S. federal income tax consequences of the merger to beneficial owners of shares of Bulova common stock. This summary is based upon the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code"), applicable Treasury Regulations thereunder, judicial decisions and current administrative rulings as in effect on the date of this Schedule 13E-3. The discussion does not address all aspects of U.S. federal income taxation that may be relevant to particular taxpayers in light of their personal circumstances or to taxpayers subject to special treatment under the Code (for example, financial institutions, regulated investment companies, grantor trusts, insurance companies, tax-exempt organizations, brokers, dealers or traders in securities or foreign currencies, persons holding shares of Bulova common stock as part of a position in a "straddle" or as part of a "hedging," "conversion" or "integrated" transaction for U.S. federal income tax purposes, and persons that have a "functional currency" other than the U.S. dollar). In addition, this summary does not address any aspect of foreign, state, local or other tax laws, or any U.S. tax laws (such as estate or gift tax) other than U.S. federal income tax laws.

Edgar Filing: BULOVA CORP - Form SC 13E3

Your receipt of cash pursuant to the merger or pursuant to the exercise of dissenters' rights will be a taxable transaction for U.S. federal income tax purposes. In general, you will recognize gain or loss for U.S. federal income tax purposes equal to the difference between the amount of cash you receive for your shares of Bulova common stock and your adjusted tax basis in your shares. Such gain or loss will be capital gain or loss if you hold your Bulova common stock as a capital asset, and generally will be long-term capital gain or loss if, at the effective date of the merger, you have held your shares for more than one year.

The cash payments made to you pursuant to the merger or pursuant to the exercise of dissenters' rights will be subject to backup U.S. federal income tax withholding, unless you provide the paying agent named in the Notice of Merger and Letter of Transmittal that you will receive following the merger, with your tax identification number (social security number or employer identification number) and certify that such number is correct, or unless an exemption from backup withholding applies.

You are urged to consult your tax advisor as to the specific tax consequences of the merger to you, including the application of state, local, foreign and other tax laws.

 - . A tax allocation agreement with respect to the filing by Loews of consolidated federal income tax returns which include Bulova and its subsidiaries, under which Bulova will (i) be paid by Loews the amount, if any, by which Loews' consolidated federal income tax is reduced by virtue of the inclusion of Bulova and its subsidiaries in Loews' consolidated federal income tax return or (ii) pay to Loews an amount, if any, equal to the federal income tax which would have been payable by Bulova if Bulova and its subsidiaries had filed a separate consolidated return.
