Re: Director Appointment Press Release

Gentlemen:

We at Save Scio have read Scio Diamond Technology Corporation's ("Scio's" or the "Company's") press release dated May 30, 2014 announcing the appointment of two new directors—Gerald McGuire and James Korn. Save Scio agrees that the Company should have an expanded board comprised of independent directors. Unfortunately, Save Scio's philosophy on the selection of directors and corporate governance appears to differ significantly from that of the current Board.

Following the appointment of the two new directors, the Company's Board is comprised of five individuals—none of whom have been elected by a vote of Scio's stockholders. According to the Company's SEC filings, Adams was appointed as the Chairman as of August 5, 2011 (along with his law partner Michael Monahan, who has since resigned from the board). Following that appointment, Theodorus Strous was appointed on December 21, 2011 and Robert Linares was appointed on January 29, 2013. And now, McGuire and Korn are being appointed by the Board.

At the risk of repeating ourselves, it is a fundamental cornerstone of corporate governance that stockholders elect directors. Although boards of directors are often given the power to appoint directors, that power is always given subject to the democratic accountability of the election process. Under the Company's bylaws, the Board can appoint directors, but only "between successive annual meetings." None of the prior appointments to the Board, some of which are almost three years old, have been ratified by a vote of the stockholders, and the Company has not held an annual meeting of the stockholders since Adams became chairman on August 5, 2011.

Despite the repeated demands of the stockholders for a meeting to exercise the most fundamental of their rights as stockholders, not only has the Board not set a definitive date for a stockholder meeting, but now it is actively appointing additional directors. As we have repeatedly stated, the Board should work with Save Scio to call a meeting of the stockholders soon that allows all stockholders a meaningful opportunity to decide who should lead the Company going forward.

Sincerely,

Bernard M. McPheely
