entered into a five-year extension of its Cooperative Research and Development Agreement (the "CRADA") with the National Cancer Institute ("NCI"), which enhances and expands the initial agreement between the Company and NCI that expired in December 2006. Under the revised CRADA, the Company and NCI agreed that the parties will collaborate in the joint development and evaluation of the Delcath System device to deliver high-dose Melphalan to patients and to evaluate the advisability of developing additional commercial agents for use with the Delcath System, the Company's percutaneous perfusion technology for region-specific delivery of chemotherapeutic and other therapeutic agents.

The revised CRADA also established that NCI's Surgery Branch will work towards completion of Delcath System's ongoing Phase III trial and will serve as the coordinating center when this study expands to a multi-center trial. The Phase III trial is treating patients with melanoma (ocular or cutaneous) metastatic to the liver using the Delcath System and the drug Melphalan.
