February '04 Order Comments:

Favorable currency exchange rates continued to positively affect February orders approximately 5 percent. Underlying orders continue to be solid and steady, but the favorable currency impact will be less going forward as we compare to last year's dollar rates, which had already begun to weaken.

Process orders reflect continued growth in Asia and Europe as well as strong growth in systems and solutions, and oil and gas projects, which are longer lead time items.

Industrial Automation orders reflect positive trends in industrial equipment, motors and controls, and power generation (alternators).

Strength in the Electronics and Telecommunications segment was driven by improvements in the OEM business and the systems business, and continued growth in Asia.

HVAC orders reflect continued gains worldwide and strength in the U.S. market.

Orders in the Appliance and Tools segment reflect improvements in storage, tools, and motors.
