Item 8.01 Other Events.

Explosion and Fires in San Bruno, California

On September 9, 2010, shortly after 6:00 P.M. (Pacific Daylight Time), an explosion occurred in San Bruno, California, a primarily residential area located in Pacific Gas and Electric Company's (Utility) service territory just south of San Francisco. Although the exact cause of the explosion has not been determined, a 30-inch steel gas transmission pipeline owned and operated by the Utility in this area was ruptured. Fires ignited and spread throughout the neighborhood. At a press conference that occurred at approximately 8:00 a.m. on September 10, 2010, various agency officials have reported that as of 8:00 a.m., the fire has been about 75 % contained. They also have reported that 38 homes have been destroyed and approximately 7 homes have been significantly damaged. At least 4 fatalities have been reported and emergency crews are continuing to search the area. The number of people who have suffered injuries has not yet been determined. The California Governor's office has declared a state of emergency in San Mateo County, where San Bruno is located, to mobilize state emergency services and resources.

The Utility is committed to working with various regulatory agencies, including the National Transportation Safety Board and the California Public Utilities Commission, to investigate the cause of the explosion and fire. The Utility maintains liability insurance for damages caused by fire in the approximate amount of $992 million in excess of a $10 million deductible. Depending on the final outcome of the investigation, and if insurance recoveries are unavailable or insufficient to cover the losses, PG&E Corporation's and the Utility's financial condition or results of operations could be materially adversely affected.

For more information, the Utility's public statement issued on September 9, 2010 and its most recent press release issued on September 10, 2010 are attached as Exhibits to this report.
