Item 1.01 Entry into a Material Definitive Agreement

Through our Armadillo Mining Corporation subsidiary, we have entered into an Option Agreement, dated January 20, 2011 to acquire 50% of the Colombian metallurgical coal company, C.I. Hunza Coal Ltda. (“Hunza”). Hunza owns and operates a mine located in the Boyaca province of Colombia, which is estimated to contain metallurgical coal resources of 16 million to 90 million tons of high quality metallurgical coal. The Hunza mine is permitted and is currently producing and marketing about 1,000 tons per month.

The option agreement provides that we will pay an exclusivity fee of US$1.4 million in stages through March 15, 2011 in order to maintain our option rights. Under the agreement, we are required to invest US$5.0 million in mine exploration and production over a 12 month period in order to acquire the 50% interest in Hunza. We are engaging outside consultants to prepare a resource and reserve study of the Hunza mine. The option agreement follows our business strategy of selling our U.S. coal assets and focusing on Colombian metallurgical coal opportunities. We recently sold our Snider Ranch, Montana property and are currently negotiating to sell our interest in the Carpenter Creek, Montana project.
