CEO Script All Employee Meetings

Good [morning/afternoon] everyone.

I wanted us all to get together as soon as possible so that you could hear from me directly why I believe so strongly that the partnership we are forming with Hydro One is the right next step as we plan for Avista's future. Following that, we'll answer as many of your questions as we can.

Let's get started and do so by addressing the elephant in the room—namely, what this transaction means for you, the Avista employees.

A lot of thought and consideration went into the decision-making process and I'm sure this news has come as a shock to many of you. I want to respect your time to process the details of this news by offering you a few key details that I believe will demonstrate the deliberate thought and diligence put into this decision.

First and foremost, I'd like to emphasize that this transaction will allow us to operate much as we do today. The big change is that instead of being a publically listed firm on the stock exchange, we will be owned by Hydro One—a one parent shareholder that is publically listed in Canada.

Processing an announcement like this is a lot to take in and I'm sure you're worried about how this impacts you.

Rest assured, there will be no workforce reductions or impact to your employee or retiree benefits as a result of this transaction. And, our commitment to provide personal and professional growth opportunities will continue going forward as it does today.

This is a case where being acquired by a larger company does not mean losing our identity or our autonomy.

We will operate as a separately owned business unit of Hydro One—much like AEL&P is a unit of Avista.

We will continue to operate under the Avista name.

We will operate from our existing headquarters and facilities.

We will operate under the same management team.

We will continue to focus on our core strategies.

We will have a separate Board of Directors for Avista, just as we do now, that will be a newly-constituted Board of Directors with members who have significant ties to the Pacific Northwest.

I will continue to be the Chairman of our local Board of Directors and will continue my role as the CEO of Avista.

With all that said, I would like to emphasize that Hydro One is not looking to change us.

Rather, with their financial resources, they want to invest in a U.S. presence to help them achieve their growth strategies. They like who we are, what we stand for and how we achieve our work.

As we've had the pleasure of getting to know the leadership team at Hydro One, I can tell you from first-hand experience they are in many respects very much like us—their dedication to their customers and to their employees makes them a very good fit for our culture. Their CEO, Mayo Schmidt, is a down-to-earth leader who is very dedicated to quality service, innovation and a healthy workplace culture.

I am sure that before today, many of you never heard of Hydro One.

Here is a quick snapshot of who they are:

Based in Toronto, they are Ontario's largest electricity transmission and distribution provider with more than 1.3 million valued customers, C$25 billion in assets and annual revenues of over C$6.5 billion.

They have a team of approximately 5,500 employees serving suburban, rural and remote communities across Ontario.

They have approximately 18,640 miles high-voltage transmission and nearly 76,430 miles primary distribution networks.

Like us, they are committed to the communities they serve, and have been rated as the top utility in Canada for their corporate citizenship, sustainability, and diversity initiatives.

They are one of only four utility companies in Canada to achieve the Sustainable Energy Company designation from the Canadian Electrical Association.

Though founded in 1906, they are a relatively new publicly-traded company. Their common stock shares are listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange and their largest shareholder is the Provincial government of Ontario.

And perhaps most importantly, like us, they are working hard toward transforming their business for the future while adapting to market, technological and social change.

Avista is the first utility in the U.S. to partner with Hydro One. This means our role is an important part of their ongoing transformation.

While this may seem like a very large change, it is important to remember to not lose sight of what we would like to ultimately achieve.

This partnership is important because our industry is undergoing significant consolidation and transformation as energy companies join forces to gain additional size and scale. This fact, creates an uncertain future. Rather than having some other entity influence the next chapter for us, we are choosing to partner with a company that will enable us to continue to author our own story and to continue to make a positive difference in the communities we serve.

Today, we are among the smallest investor-owned utilities remaining in the nation. And, as we think about our future and what's best for us, it is important to step up to meet that challenge.

This decision did not come easy. It was of utmost importance to lock in an agreement that best serves our employees, our customers, our communities and our shareholders.

This transaction accomplishes all of that.

First, as I said, we are preserving our identity and our culture for the benefit of our employees and the health of our business. We have a great deal in common with Hydro One. Our companies are both known for our high service quality, operational excellence, and innovation.

Second, it's a win for our customers, who will continue to receive clean, safe, high quality, and reliable service at reasonable rates. This partnership expands our opportunities to be innovative and gain operating efficiencies by extending the use of technology, best practices and business process over a broader customer base and a broader set of infrastructure. Having a partner that has similar values and culture will allow us to do much more together.

Third, we will continue our commitments to benefit the communities we serve through philanthropic contributions and economic development. In fact, Hydro One has committed to us to do more by nearly doubling current levels of community contributions.

And, fourth, this transaction delivers solid value to our shareholders, who will receive an attractive _% premium for their shares.

We are teaming up with Hydro One at a time of strength and growth for our company. Through this partnership, we preserve our people, our culture and our way of doing business. It compounds our opportunities to innovate and gain efficiencies in our business while benefiting all four legs of the stool on day one.

It will take some time before we cross the finish line. The agreement is subject to approval by Avista's shareholders, as well as by regulators, and other customary conditions. It's expected to close sometime during the second half of 2018.

Until then, Avista and Hydro One will operate as two independent companies exactly the way we do today.

As we move through the process, we'll keep you informed. Some of the ways we'll do that will be through our employee communications like continued meetings with employees and leaders, communications in e.view and resources on our intranet and customer website, so please stay tuned.

I want to thank you all for the work you do each day and for taking the time to dial in or attend this meeting today. I hope that as you process this shift, you will share my enthusiasm for the future of our company.

Now let's open it up for questions.
