Mr. Jack Pope
Chairman, Audit Committee
Board of Directors

VIA EMAIL AND MAIL

Dear Mr. Pope,

Regan Fund Management has been a large shareholder of Per-Se Technologies for over five years and has worked constructively through several challenges with the management and Board of Directors. Until recently, I firmly believed that the external challenges which plagued the company through it's "turnaround" were behind us and that continued strong execution by the current management team would yield rewards for all shareholders. Recent events have proven that my conclusion was premature.

The management team, led by Phil Pead, has done a commendable job returning the business to profitability, generating three years of earnings growth, and positioning the company for meaningful revenue growth.

The events surrounding the conclusion of the 2003 year-end audit and required filing on Form 10-K with the SEC have resulted in significant damage to the value of the common stock of Per-Se of over 50 percent. Worse, it threatens the credibility of the management team and Board in the eyes of investors. For the audit process to run so disastrously that it can result in such loss of value is inexplicable and unforgivable. It in effect undercuts the hard work of the management team over the last three years. I suspect it has already had some impact on the confidence of current and prospective customers, and this impact can only grow the longer the delay goes on and questions exist. To me, there is no viable explanation for an issue of this magnitude to have been overlooked or misunderstood, and it is the responsibility of the audit committee to ensure that it is resolved quickly.

Removals from the Board at this time would clearly send the wrong message to shareholders, otherwise I would consider that a viable option. Members of the board, with few exceptions, have purchased little to no common stock with their own money, leaving the real owners of the company to bear the full burden of the audit committee's complacency. I hope this situation will begin to change at the first available trading opportunity.

I will call you this week to discuss these points.

Sincerely,

Edgar Filing: REGAN BASIL P - Form SC 13D
