The following is a transcript of Jeffrey R. Immelt's remarks at the 2017 Electrical Products Group (EPG) Conference which has been made publicly available by the General Electric Company.

<Jeffrey R. Immelt >: Now just a quick update on Baker Hughes, right? So we've had kind of ongoing discussions. And I would still say, we're thinking we should get this closed, let's say, by the end of June, early July, sometime in that time period. The 2020 and the synergies we've looked at. So we've got a bucket of synergies that's probably twice what we show on this page in terms of how think about the business going forward. Look, we see some signs that are encouraging, particularly onshore in the Oil & Gas business, but pricing and things like that are still tough so we're not – it's one that we're kind of cautious in our underwriting around...

<Jeffrey R. Immelt >: This kind of shows you the way you think about it from an industry standpoint. So oil and gas is an essential industry for us. This is a place where we've rolled out, I would say, a series of applications. The point I'd make on this page is, we've got the business' biggest customers. We've got a pipeline of $1 billion a year. So we're well on our way to developing $1 billion franchise here just in one industry. If you look across the top, all of the onshore products sync up with GE Baker Hughes. So we've got a great suite at GE Baker Hughes that we're going to be able to monetize...

<Jeffrey R. Immelt >: So let me end there, and I'm happy to take questions...

<Q – Robert P. McCarthy>: I think about how to ask this question. In terms of the portfolio, obviously, with Baker Hughes, pretty interesting deal from the standpoint of how you structured it. And it gives you some flexibility, right, because you can consolidate it or you could punt it, depending. Do you think this could be an interesting testing ground for perhaps thinking about other parts of the portfolio down the road if it's successful to pursue that kind of structure for Healthcare or the portfolio...

<A – Jeffrey R. Immelt >: Really, Rob, I don't - in other words, I don't think we - we don't think about this as being necessarily like a capital markets play. Really, it was a marriage - it was the structure for convenience. Now it does create some optionality in terms of how you think about it, and we should watch to see where that goes...

And so what I would say, Rob, is look, we're always going to be fast on our feet and try to create shareholder value. And if we're not good at a business we're going to sell it. And to your point, Baker Hughes gives us a perspective that we'd be crazy not to see, do investors like it more? Does it give you a different perspective on everything else? And we're open to that, always have been, always will be...

Caution Concerning Forward-Looking Statements

This communication contains "forward-looking" statements as that term is defined in Section 27A of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and Section 21E of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended by the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, including statements regarding the proposed transaction between GE and Baker Hughes. All statements, other than historical facts, including statements regarding the expected timing and structure of the proposed transaction; the ability of the parties to complete the proposed transaction considering the various closing conditions; the expected benefits of the proposed transaction such as improved operations, enhanced revenues and cash flow, synergies, growth potential, market profile, customers' business plans and financial strength; the competitive ability and position of the combined company following completion of the proposed transaction, including the projected impact on GE's earnings per share; oil and natural gas market conditions; costs and availability of resources; legal, economic and regulatory conditions; and any assumptions underlying any of the foregoing, are forward-looking statements. Forward-looking statements concern future circumstances and results and other statements that are not historical facts and are sometimes identified by the words "may," "will," "should," "potential," "intend," "expect," "endeavor," "seek," "anticipate," "estimate," "overestimate," "underestimate," "believe," "could," "project," "predict," "target" or other similar words or expressions. Forward-looking statements are based upon current plans, estimates and expectations that are subject to risks, uncertainties and assumptions. Should one or more of these risks or uncertainties materialize, or should underlying assumptions prove incorrect, actual results may vary materially from those indicated or anticipated by such forward-looking statements. The inclusion of such statements should not be regarded as a representation that such plans, estimates or expectations will be achieved. Important factors that could cause actual results to differ materially from such plans, estimates or expectations include, among others, (1) that one or more closing conditions to the transaction, including certain regulatory approvals, may not be satisfied or waived, on a timely basis or otherwise, including that a governmental entity may prohibit, delay or refuse to grant approval for the consummation of the proposed transaction, may require conditions, limitations or restrictions in connection with such approvals or that the required approval by the stockholders of Baker Hughes may not be obtained; (2) the risk that the proposed transaction may not be completed in the time frame expected by GE or Baker Hughes, or at all; (3) unexpected costs, charges or expenses resulting from the proposed transaction; (4) uncertainty of the expected financial performance of the combined company following completion of the proposed transaction; (5) failure to realize the anticipated benefits of the proposed transaction, including as a result of delay in completing the proposed transaction or integrating the businesses of GE, Baker Hughes and Newco; (6) the ability of the combined company to implement its business strategy; (7) difficulties and delays in achieving revenue and cost synergies of the combined company;

(8) inability to retain and hire key personnel; (9) the occurrence of any event that could give rise to termination of the proposed transaction; (10) the risk that stockholder litigation in connection with the proposed transaction or other settlements or investigations may affect the timing or occurrence of the contemplated merger or result in significant costs of defense, indemnification and liability; (11) evolving legal, regulatory and tax regimes; (12) changes in general economic and/or industry specific conditions, including oil price changes; (13) actions by third parties, including government agencies; and (14) other risk factors as detailed from time to time in GE's and Baker Hughes' reports filed with the SEC, including GE's and Baker Hughes' annual report on Form 10-K, periodic quarterly reports on Form 10-Q, periodic current reports on Form 8-K and other documents filed with the SEC. The foregoing list of important factors is not exclusive.

Any forward-looking statements speak only as of the date of this communication. Neither GE nor Baker Hughes undertakes any obligation to update any forward-looking statements, whether as a result of new information or developments, future events or otherwise, except as required by law. Readers are cautioned not to place undue reliance on any of these forward-looking statements.
