June 2011 Order Comments:

Emerson order growth remained solid in the trailing three-month period, but we have seen a definite weakening of general business activity in June and July. U.S. and European economies have clearly slowed and entered a soft-patch and it remains unclear if they will improve much in the second half of the calendar year. Industrial-related businesses are still strong, but we expect them eventually to soften due to the generally poor economic environment (the negative budget discourse in Washington D.C. and ongoing European debt crisis) and weakening trends, as well as more challenging comparisons. Consumer and discretionary spending remain weak and any recovery in these end markets continues to be pushed out. Currency exchange rates positively impacted orders by approximately 7 percentage points.

Process Management order growth remained strong across global end markets. Project and MRO order strength continued, but order growth comparisons will become increasingly difficult for the remainder of the fiscal year. Although currency exchange rates positively impacted Process Management orders by 14 percentage points, underlying orders excluding currency were still up in the range of 10 to 15 percent.

Industrial Automation order trends remained solid but continued to moderate as comparisons became increasingly difficult. Orders were driven by strength in the power generating alternators business. Currency exchange rates positively impacted orders by 8 percentage points.

Network Power orders increased approximately 5 percent in the trailing three-month period. Increases in the Network Power business in Asia, Europe and Latin America, and continued solid order rates for the uninterruptible power supply business were partially offset by weakness in the embedded computing and power businesses and the energy systems business. Currency exchange rates positively impacted orders by 4 percentage points.

Climate Technologies orders were slightly negative for the trailing three-month period. Declines in the U.S. residential and temperature controls businesses were partially offset by growth in Europe and Asia, and the global refrigeration businesses.

Tools and Storage trailing three-month orders showed improvement, reflecting growth in the professional tools and storage businesses, partially offset by weakness in the wet/dry vacuum business.
